The movie was premiered on 27 September 2008 at the opening ceremony of the 2008 Commonwealth Games in India. Based on Jane Austen's 1815 novel Sense and Sensibility which tells the story of some members of a close-knit English family living in rural England shortly after the end of the Napoleonic Wars, it is set against the backdrop of rising Indian nationalism during British colonial rule. The story is about two sisters who end up having two different husbands. One of the sisters is more traditional and another one is more modern. The film has received mostly positive reviews from critics. Rohit Mehta (Shah Rukh Khan) is a wealthy businessman, who works in London for his father, Mr. Anand Mehta (Om Puri). He does not believe in true love or if it even exists. He has determined that he will remain unmarried for the rest of his life, reasoning that marriage can be very painful after watching both his parents suffer through their loveless marriage. Rohit is very successful in his work, and is personally requested by Anand Mehta to stay in London and look after their jewelry business. One day, he finds a bride, and agrees to marry her (with the intention of divorce) as part of an arranged marriage - she is Tina (Anushka Sharma), the daughter of Mr. D'Mello (Parmeet Sethi), an Indian businessman who wants to do business with Rohit's father. After meeting her only once, Rohit agrees to marry her as he finds her pretty and believes that she will be a good wife and possibly give him children. On their wedding day, Tina informs Rohit that she actually believes in marriage and that she loves him. In the meantime, Mr. D'Mello is very interested in Rohit's father's jewelry business and demands that Anand Mehta send Rohit to India for further business negotiations. Mr. D'Mello pays for an ocean-front suite in luxury hotel in Goa, where he plans to seduce his daughter to get her married off to him, but when Tina goes to meet him, she finds that he has led her into believing that he loves her when he is actually blackmailing her into marrying him. When Tina refuses his proposal, Mr. D'Mello shows her a photograph of someone who looks like her (Rohit). Tina is confused about the photo, but decides to stay in Goa for a few more days. She meets Rohit in a restaurant and they spend time together going around Goa together. Rohit has no idea what she looks like, but Tina falls in love with Rohit at first sight when she sees him waiting in a restaurant - she decides to pursue him regardless of the fact that he is already engaged to another woman back in London. When Anand Mehta arrives from London with Rohit, Tina confronts her father and refuses to marry him. She runs away from home and goes to the restaurant where she had last seen Rohit. There she encounters Mr.
